Finally, a quick and easy way for company drivers to track their travel and meal expenses for tax purposes!

The Canadian Trucking Alliance is launching a new product that ensures long-haul company drivers are able to realize the maximum possible benefit from the Federal government's decision to increase the deductible amount for the meals they purchase while on the road. Not only does the book explain the rules in clear language, it also provides the record-keeping tables required by CRA. The new Practical Travel Expenses for Long-Haul Drivers handbook is a one-stop solution for professional drivers to track and claim travel expenses. The deduction can amount to $10,000 for many drivers, so getting it right is very important.

The handbook explains Canada Revenue Agency rules and details what drivers can deduct and how much. Not only does the handbook explain the different methods drivers can use to track their expenses, it also includes simplified record keeping forms that can be used to support the claim. Carriers can support their drivers by making sure they never miss out on a meal deduction claim again. And you'll all sleep easy knowing your doing it right!

This book explains:

- who can and can't claim the deduction for meals and lodging
- how much can be claimed
- what length of trip qualifies for a meal allowance and expenses in the US
- detailed explanation and examples of the record keeping methods along with frequently asked questions
